

Do you get migraine headaches?

Will you be starting a new medication to prevent migraine headaches?

We are looking for people to take part in observational research to learn more about the medications used to prevent migraine headaches. Doctors will gather information about people's usual care and how well their prescribed migraine medications work for them.

You may be able to take part if you:

- are 18 years of age or older
- have been diagnosed with migraine
- are starting a migraine prevention medication or switching to a different one
- have access to the internet on a computer or your mobile phone.

If you chose to take part, you will need to provide information about your health and treatments about every 6 months for up to 2 years. You will continue to have appointments with the doctor who usually treats your migraine headaches, at the doctor's office, by telephone, or online.

You will also need to complete a diary, available online or via a mobile app, for each migraine headache you have, plus a monthly questionnaire.

You will not receive any investigational drug as part of this research. You will continue to take any medication(s) prescribed by your doctor.
